

What's Changed
17 June 2019

Privacy Policy

The manner in which we handle persona data has not changed in any way.

We have however rewritten our Privacy Policy purely to make it easier to read and understand. We've reorganised and relabelled many sections, simplified language, and removed unnecessary duplication and possible ambiguity.

For those of you familiar with our previous version, note the following changes to the provisions themselves:

- In Part 1 relating to 'Customers', we've more clearly distinguished the management of data relating to potential customers from those relating to existing customers. Also, given that our Privacy Policy explains how we process personal data in our capacity as a controller, the previous 'transmission data' section (dealing with how our customers' data is transmitted as part of our service) now more rightly appears in our service agreement with our customers i.e. our Global Services Agreement
- In Part 3, we've clarified that although Megaport (Services) Pty Ltd operates our websites, the information collected via our websites is still controlled by our regional operational entities.